True, different people show very different results. Some can perform much better than some others. Some people's result is 100% of correct decisions, something that can be achieved through systematic training. And such an effect is no rarity. The fundamental thing is to have training sessions on a systematic basis. You will surely achieve your goal if you spend enough time training. Zero result is impossible. How it works? The software offers the user to guess further price movement (up or down) from the starting line (i.e. the closing price of the previous bar). The right trend is the one where the price goes over a certain number of points from the starting line (e.g. 50 points). One is to guess the right trend and it changes for each test - the software uses a random number generator. Logic makes little sense in this situation - based on the probability theory one cannot produce 100% of correct answers. Therefore the right answer can be obtained intuitively. The software allows the user to select a currency pair (symbol) and the number of points the chart has to go to determine the right trend.
