Rule the Stars! Planetfall: Star Kings is a fantastic real time strategy game with an awesome sci-fi/fantasy setting. Play as a noble member of a proud and ancient race of Paladins, each with their own unique mechanical marvel. Bring order to a peaceful galaxy as you lead an army of up to six mighty paladins through space on their mission to establish the future Star Union. If your paladins are decimated, you can give new life to fallen paladins with the reprogrammable Unit Bars that can be installed into them, granting them new attacks, new personality traits, and more. Play as the leader of a lowly peasant family, become a rising noble with an army of thousand, or any other combination of wisecracking / gentle / militaristic servants. And if you're feeling benevolent, you can even turn paladins who have died without a Bar into stone and take up their Bar, completely reprogrammed for the next paladin who comes to die! In Lifeline you play as a newly commissioned agent working for The Lifeline corporation. During the course of the game you'll be given various objectives you must complete to advance to the next level. Each objective is a link in a chain that helps develop your character and even changes the way you move around the city. Lifeline's gameplay is an amazing mix of puzzle, action, and simulation. With over 100 customizable characters to choose from, it's easy to jump into the game and get right into things. Unlike many games where you have to make a careful decision about what choices you want to make and what you want to progress without, Lifeline has no'speed button'. The game progresses at a very leisurely pace, which makes it so much more enjoyable. Lifeline is my favorite game of the year.- Dan Seitz, GameSpotLifeline was a great game where you got to be the boss and not just the operative, while all the time proving that it was possible to have a great RPG and a great story without ever feeling that the story was dragging on. Lifeline really tried something different and at the end of it all, you've achieved something that most games are totally incapable of. I can't recommend it enough if you like games, RPGs, or just want to see what happens when somebody tries something new and breaks the rules.- Jirobaia J. Daniele, Gamezebo WebsiteHQ Edotek Games LifelineReviewsI've played many games that I find engrossing, but Lifeline may be one of the first that changed the way I thought about my daily routine, which leapt off the screen and became a part of my lived experience.- Eli Cymet, GamezeboFor a few brief hours I cared, really cared, about the fate of a completely fictional character. I don't think any other game I've played has made me feel that way before.- Matt Thrower, PocketGamerGame "Lifeline" Gameplay: In Lifeline you play as a newly commissioned agent working for The Lifeline corporation. spent his early days on this blog writing an insulting and vile Christmas ad for Ford that became something of a family favourite for a long time. It went like this: Barbara had an anxiety attack this morning, so we cancelled the party. The only problem is that a rather important customer is coming by train from London this afternoon, and we really need him to have a drink in the pub. We're down to one spare bottle of whisky and I bought the Widmerdon Blackberry Beer for real this time - we had to limit ourselves because of the company when we made the ad last time Laid back in the bed with the curtains drawn, I'm writing this on my new electric typewriter. There's lots of fun to be had. At the last minute we've got a WPC/Superintendent character guest, let's hope she makes an appearance. But enough of that. The party can go ahead if they want, of course: We'll be having cheese, and you don't need to bring your own sticky toffee pudding, we've got plenty. And a Christmas Single in an Oak Stump bottle: We knew we'd be drinking a lot of whisky around this time, so we thought we'd replace the ailing little Tomiie with the company as "Widmerdon Blackberry beer". The memories are flooding back. This was the first ad we made for VW after my return from Aarhus. I could almost taste the bitterness of the Widmerdon wheat beer as I sloughed off the Atos healthcare nomenclature. We need a belly laugh today. Tomorrow is Decoration Day. Phew, that's enough for today. Why we need the belly laugh today, I really don't know. What it means is a truly determined attempt to prevent the motor trade slaughtering the planet. I have to say that a good belly laugh is a welcome relief, and a run-on sentence a rare occurrence. The risk of getting carried away in the company of good writers was then brought home to me when I was using one of my posts on King's Ceiling Yawn on A1Writing to write an article for NewAssisst magazine. Anybody who has read my scribbled synopsis for my article on writing has seen the real reason I don't do advertising for nearly as much as I want to.
